Distress in Northern Forests and Asks Government's Aid.St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 21.—Capt. Hugo von Abercon and his aid, August Blankertz, in the balloon Germania, probably have broken the world's record for distance by landing Wednesday morning at Coocoocache, Champlain County, Quebec, Canada, 172 miles northwest of Quebec. This would bring the distance covered from St. Louis by the Germania to about 1,185 miles, two miles better than the world's record.The German aerobats were in the air only about forty-eight hours, and have set a new record for speed. The landing point is believed to be about 100 miles west of Kiskadee, where a balloon was sighted Wednesday. It is a wilderness of lakes and forests. This leaves three balloons unaccounted for.The Aero Club of St. Louis is alarmed at the prolonged silence of three balloon pilots and their aids, and today asked the Canadian government to begin a hunt for them. It is believed that the balloons landed Wednesday night and the occupants of the three balloons are in distress in the forests of Canada.The appeals for assistance were addressed to Lieut. Gov. J. M. Gibson, of Toronto, and Lieut. Gov. C. Alphonse Pellatier, at Quebec. The Hudson Bay Company, with headquarters at Montreal, was also asked to begin a search for the aerobats.Three balloons are as yet unreported.
They are the America II, the Yankee entry; Azarea, a Swiss entry, and Dusseldorf II, a German entry.Howley and Post Abroad.
America II is manned by Allen R. How-ley, pilot, and Augustus Post, aid, both of New York City; the Dusseldorf, by Hans Gerike, pilot, and J. W. Perkins, aid, and the Azarea by Emil Messner, pilot, and Leon Gordanian, aid.The Germania, pilot of the balloon Holvetta, and Paul Ambruster, his aid, are now on a train from Mattawa to Montreal and say that they have broken all records for long distance.A Cobalt special is on its way to the balloon seen over South Loren, Northern Ontario, was the Germania, as it is reported from Villeneuve that the aerobats from the balloon stopped last night at the hotel there.

of Accident.New York, Oct. 21.—Nelson W. Aldrich, senior United States Senator from Rhode Island, was sitting up this afternoon after his accident."The only reason he won't see you himself," said Winthrop Aldrich, his son, at his apartment at 540 Park avenue, "is because of the cut on his left temple. His personal vanity forbids him to let anyone see that scar."Dr. H. Holbrook Curtis, of 111 Madison avenue, the family physician, said tonight that there was absolutely no cause for the slightest alarm for the Senator.
He said it would be a matter of a few days before he would be out again.Senator Aldrich was walking Thursday afternoon, and was crossing Madison avenue at Sixty-second street about 5:30 when a green taxi drove down on him.
In jumping out of the way of this he got in front of a Madison Avenue car. He was struck sideways and thrown two or three yards, but in such a manner as to be out of the path of the car. The car went on. The Senator walked the two blocks to his son's apartment without any assistance.

added to the circumstances surrounding the accident to the Countess Irma de Beaufort when her father, Martin H. Kilgallon, and her husband, Count Mourik de Beaufort, visited her at St. Luke's Hospital this afternoon, and left together after a half hour's talk with the injured countess.The nobleman and his father-in-law appeared worried, and neither spoke to the other as they left the hospital and entered an automobile. They declined to walking down the stairway in the Kilgallon residence, 329 Michigan avenue. She fell to the foot of the stairway and is said to have been severely hurt.The entire case was shrouded in mystery. A negro stood guard at the Michigan avenue house and kept off all in-quirers with the statement that the family left Thursday for a stay at its coun-

Defendant Admits He Made No Effort to Trace Her.Did Not Even Suggest to His Lawyers that Belle Elmore Be Located—Says It Would Have Been Difficult for Others to Have Placed Body in Cellar of His Home.
Draper's Assistant a Witness.London, Oct. 21.—There was the most intense interest in the Old Bailey this morning when the trial of Dr. Hawley Crippen for the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, the actress, was resumed and counsel for the government began the cross-examination of the prisoner. The small court room was packed and there was suppressed excitement all through the examination.For three hours and a half Dr. Crippen was subjected to a merciless cross-examination by Richard D. Maize, C. C., who is conducting the prosecution. Dr.
Crippen, on the whole, bore the ordeal remarkably well. At no time did he hesitate or become confused. He maintained throughout the long series of questions a manner that was free of any sign of nervousness or apprehension.Dr. Crippen began by admitting that so far as he knew nobody had seen Mrs.
Crippen since the night of January 21 last. In reply to further questions by the prosecutor he also admitted that he had not made or caused to be made any inquiries in regard to her movements immediately following his disappearance nor even since his arrest. He had not even suggested to his lawyers that Mrs.
Crippen should be traced. In explanation of this, the prisoner said he had not taken action of this kind because he had placed his defense entirely in the hands of his counsel.A Mystery to Him.
Replying to questions in regard to the remains found in the cellar of his house on Hilldrop Crescent, Dr. Crippen said he did not know how they could have been placed there by others at any time during his five and a half years' tenancy of the house.Chief Justice Alderson emphasized this point by asking the prisoner if he wished the jury to believe that such a thing could have been done without his knowledge. Dr. Crippen replied that it was not probable. He believed, however, that it was possible, because both himself and his wife were often absent for months at a time.Counselor Maize questioned Dr. Crippen in great detail about the letters announcing the death of his wife in various last March which he sent to various intimate friends.In reply Dr. Crippen, with some show of impatience, said he had repeatedly admitted that the statements he made in the letters were lies.Counselor Maize asked the prisoner if he had played the role of bereaved husband well.Dr. Crippen replied that the counselor had questioned the recipients of his letters on this point.Dr. Crippen adhered closely to his story of the plot with the quartermaster of the steamship Montrose. According to his story, Crippen was told by a note indicating that he had committed suicide and the quartermaster was to secrete him in the cargo, allowing him to escape at master's word.During the night the quartermaster was to make a splash in the water, and when Crippen's note was found it was surmised that he would be overboard and no search would be made for him.Denies He Fled in Fear.
Time after time the prisoner refused to admit that he fled in fear of a charge of murder. This was the point which the prosecuting counsel pressed hardest and longest of all, but he could not get Crippen to admit that the idea of a murder charge ever entered his mind until he professed his wife. This was the time when Inspector Dew visited the house on Hilldrop Crescent after friends of Mrs.
Crippen had called the attention of the authorities to her mysterious disappearance.Dr. Crippen's story did not seem to create a favorable impression in the court room through his manner did.The close of his long cross-examination Dr. Crippen returned to the dock apparently as fresh and undisturbed as when the ordeal began.The jury spent most of the forenoon in the judge's room making a most thorough examination of the piece of flesh taken from the body found in Crippen's cellar, which is alleged to contain a scar on the one borne by Mrs. Crippen.During the last two hours of the session Dr. Crippen was distinctly more serious than he had been during the earlier part of the day. He was also much paler.Girl Thence that Night.
When the defense had put in all its witnesses Mr. Tobin, of counsel, spoke for one hour and five minutes. He dwelt on the fact that Miss Le Neve slept in the house on Hilldrop Crescent the night after the disappearance of Mrs. Crippen.
He declared that it was inconceivable that Crippen could have brought his mistress to the house after committing murder and with the body of his wife still on the premises. The chief justice allowed the prosecution to put in the witness box a draper's assistant who apparently proved that the remains were buried in the cellar of the house on Hill-drop Crescent during the time Crippen was in the dock.The draper's assistant testified that a tag attached to a portion of the suit of pajamas found with the body bore the names of Jones Brothers, Limited, and Jones Brothers, he testified, had only been a limited company since 1904. He testified further that August 18 pajamas of the same pattern as those found with the body had been delivered at the Hilldrop Crescent house either in December, 1908, or January, 1909.The trial was then adjourned until tomorrow.Blackstone's Special Spring, $2.

TO FACE PROSECUTIONDaughter Allows Him to Make Love, and Deserted Wife's Trap Is Successful.Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—With the arrest of Benjamin J. Miller on a charge of non-support, preferred by his wife, Elizabeth Miller, of 300 Monroe street, a strange story was revealed of a daughter allowing her father to make love to her in another city so that she might entice him to this city that her deserted mother might prosecute him.Eleven years ago Miller deserted his family, his wife says. For years nothing was heard of him. Then, through a sister-in-law, who was living in New York City, the deserted wife learned of his whereabouts.A plan was entered upon by Mrs. Miller, her daughter Bertha, eighteen years old, and the sister-in-law in New York.
It was arranged that Bertha should go to New York and the sister-in-law was to have Miller come to her home to attend a party.The plot of the plan was that her husband should fall in love with his own daughter, whom he had not seen since he was a child, and whom it was believed he would not know. Bertha went to New York and on the night appointed Miller came to the house.As it had been expected he did not recognize the fascinating young woman his own daughter. The plot succeeded so well, it was said by Mrs. Miller, that the infatuated man was willing and eager to accompany Bertha to this city.This was about a week ago, and packing up his trunk Miller came here with his daughter, never suspecting the true state of affairs. On their arrival in this city Bertha took her father to the house in Monroe street, where he was arrested and taken before Magistrate Beaton, who held him in bail.

WANT CONFERENCE

Government Will Be Gainer, Declares the Collector.

REMIT CRIMINAL PENALTIES

Full Civil Damages Will Be Exacted and Voluntary Admissions Will Not Avail—Speedy Confessions Follow Revelation in the Duvon Case—Private Trade Invoices.New York, Oct. 21.—Collector William Loeb Jr., upon his return to-day from the conference which he had on Thursday with Secretary MacVeagh, of the Treasury Department, said that a course had been agreed upon for handling the unusual circumstances evolved by the voluntary admission of many importers in New York of the guilt of cheating the customs by undervaluation. Though the collector was guarded in his statements he admitted that "several hundred thousands of dollars would be saved to the government by the attitude of the guilty importers."But the collector was quick to correct an impression which arose out of Washington reports of the conference between Loeb and the Secretary and which had it that the importers in question had voluntarily confessed unsuspected thefts from the customs to the collector of the port of New York.No Pricking Conscience.
With a grim smile of satisfaction Mr.
Loeb said that there had not been any great display of pricking conscience on the part of any of the importers in the cases, they had been caught with the goods and, finding themselves caught, had volunteered to turn over all their books to the collector and thus expedite and assist in their own punishment.Mr. Loeb said that it had been agreed in Washington that he should proceed to lay the several cases before the district attorney as he would in any ordinary case of fraud in the customs. Then the district attorney might use his discretion in giving each offender immunity on the promise that, if called upon, he would give evidence in any other case in which his testimony might be needed.Though the criminal penalties will thus be remitted, full civil damages will be exacted in each case. Every offender will be charged full duty on the value of his goods, entered under false valuation, besides the value of the goods which is exact in cases of customs fraud."I cannot say just now how many firms have confessed to customs evasions and thrown themselves on our mercy," Mr.
Loeb said to-day. "You can put it down as several, at least, and there is every prospect that more will fall into line before very long. I will say of the number there are at least four in one line of business, but I cannot tell you what that line is."Private Trade Invoices.
"The method of evasion used in all of these cases at present under consideration was the same as one of the Duvons' methods—the filing of undervalued consular invoices and the use of private trade invoices for the squaring of secret accounts between dealer and purchaser.
In cases such as these it is very difficult for the government to work up its case against any individual firm which is hostile to it, and defies prosecution, for the firm keeps possession of the private in-voices, and without a quick raid upon unsuspecting officers these papers cannot be had."The collector said that the guilty importers began to send their lawyers to him just as soon as they caught wind of investigations which had been set on foot against them. The representatives came by twos and threes, and made inquiries as to what would be the rewards of speedy confession. More will be coming very shortly, he collected thinks, because the importers who have been cheating the customs have discovered that some very relentless digging into facts have been going on and will continue.KENYON IS IN LINE.

late Senator J. P. Dolliver. The appointment of Kenyon is generally considered

Mr. Kenyon was one of Senator Dollivserved a term or two on the district bench at Fort Dodge. Kenyon has al-

LODGE IN BOSTONMassachusetts Praised as a Progressive State.

GETS GLOWING WELCOME

Gov. Draper Defends the State Administration.Senator Presents Roosevelt, Who Is Cheered to the Echo-Taft's Name Also Loudly Applauded—Colonel Goes to New Hampshire To-day to Speak in Behalf of Robert Bass, the Progressive Candidate.Boston, Mass., Oct. 21.—Those who expected that Mr. Roosevelt would say something in his speech for Senator Lodge here to-night were disappointed.
The colonel merely gave a red hot indorsement of the Senator and asked the people of Massachusetts to return to the United States Senate a man who had always stood for progressive legislation.
The colonel played safe on national issues in his speech before a great audience of 8,000 persons in the arena to-night.They are having a lively scrap in this State over the tariff issue, and he dwelt at length on that matter. But he only repeated what he has said a good many times before. He declared that the principle of the tariff is right so far as the Republican party is concerned, but that the method has been unsatisfactory. He maintained as before that the question that must be taken up by a tariff commission is such as President Taft has instituted.Massachusetts took kindly to Mr.
Roosevelt to-night. The crowd that jammed itself into the arena yelled vociferously because they like the colonel.
They applauded his knoxes upon Candidate Eugene Foss, who were met when he rapped the Democrats. They were pleased when Mr. Roosevelt indorsed Gov. Draper for re-election. The governor was present to acknowledge the salute.Does Not Repudiate Tariff.
The colonel set out from the beginning to make himself clear upon the issues he has been expounding ever since he started to campaign. He declared for honesty and whacked at corruption in politics.
He steered clear of anything that might be taken as a repudiation of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, for Massachusetts is highly interested in that.Pamphlets defending the attack upon the tariff bill were distributed profusely throughout the hall. They explained that the cost of living has not been increased by the legislation of the last Congress.
The colonel did not say anything about that. One of the things that Mr. Roosevelt has not heard a great deal of has been applause for President Taft. He heard that to-night. When he mentioned the name of the President the audience cheered. The colonel twice referred to the President, but he did so only in connection with the tariff commission and the maximum and minimum, which he has none to repudiate.No Reply to Ultimatum.
A good many persons in the audience were on the alert to-night to see if the colonel would make a public reply to a letter sent to him by Frederick W. Peabody, a well-known lawyer of Boston.
Mr. Peabody issued an ultimatum to the colonel, stating that if Mr. Roosevelt did not tell plain blank to-night whether or not he would run for the Presidency in 1912 or would support the candidacy of William H. Taft he would bolt and vote the entire straight Democratic ticket.Roosevelt did not answer it.
Neither will he probably answer it.
In the matter of enthusiasm the colonel has met no livelier crowds on his travels than the one that gathered in the arena to-night. It was a Republican house from beginning to end.Gov. Draper made a speech, in which he spoke of what he has done and what the Democrats will not do if elected. He was followed by Senator Lodge. Mr.
Lodge praised his home State and spent most of the few minutes he occupied by saying kind things about Roosevelt. He paid high tribute to the colonel as a patriot, soldier, and tribune of the American people. The Senator was loudly received.Outburst of Enthusiasm.
When Mr. Roosevelt arose to speak there was a tremendous outburst of enthusiasm that swept through the auditorium for about a minute. Every time he opened his mouth the crowd yelled for "Teddy," and when he beamed upon them they whooped the louder.Mr. Roosevelt arrived in Boston at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Mrs. Roosevelt came with him. They were met by Senator Lodge, United States Marshal Murphy, and Roger Walcott. They went to the home of Dr. W. S. Bigelow, brother-in-law of Mr. Lodge, who lives in Beacon street.There was a dinner in the colonel's honor at the Union Club this evening, after which he hustled for the arena to speak.To-morrow evening he will leave Boston at 9 o'clock for a day's journey into New Hampshire to stump for Robert Bass, the progressive candidate for governor. He will stop at Nashua, Concord, and Manchester, returning to this city in the evening. Mr. Roosevelt will return to New York Sunday afternoon.PLACE FOR MRS. CLEVELAND.

Mrs. Caroline B. Alexander, of Hoboken, and Mrs. Lewis T. Bryant, of Atlantic the reformatory, though it was tidily understood when the enabling bill was passed last winter that the necessary funds would be included in the appropriation bills of next winter.
